

Active Weather Pattern Today through Sunday Morning

Important Forecast Changes

NEW

- A Level 3 out of 5 is now in effect for today for a large portion of South-Central Texas.

Key Messages

- ✓ Level 1-3 out of 5 risk for scattered severe storms today across south-central Texas.
  - After morning activity moves east, a second round of scattered storms is possible 2-10 PM along a cold front.
  - Large to very large hail and damaging winds gusts are the main threats.
  - Storms may produce heavy rainfall with robust rainfall rates leading to isolated flash flooding. See Excessive Rainfall Outlooks on next page.
- ✓ There is high confidence that there will be multiple rounds of showers and storms tonight through Sunday morning.
  - Overnight tonight, favored storm coverage will be over western and southern areas.
  - Confidence is low on exact timing and locations Saturday through Sunday morning.
- ✓ Pockets of heavy rainfall are possible through Sunday morning, which could produce isolated flooding. A few strong to severe storms capable of producing hail are also possible.

Friday Individual Severe Hazard Probabilities

Tornado

Wind

Hail

Hatching indicates the potential for hail of 2" diameter or greater.

Excessive Rainfall Outlooks Friday and Saturday

