Exceptions to disclosure fall into two general categories: 1) mandatory exceptions that make information confidential and require a governmental body to withhold information, and 2) discretionary exceptions that allow but do not require a governmental body to withhold information. You may find information about mandatory and discretionary exceptions at Confidential Information under the Public Information Act | Office of the Attorney General \(texasattorneygeneral.gov\).

In most instances, a governmental body is required to request a decision from the Attorney General in order to withhold information from a requester. However, a requester may permit a governmental body to redact information without requesting an Attorney General decision. You are not required to agree to the redaction of any information responsive to your request, but doing so may streamline the handling of your request. If you agree to redactions in this request, then you may request the redacted information in a future information request.
